Apple Computer Inc.

Apple Computer Inc. is famous for its user-friendly hardware such as iPod, iMac, iTunes, and iLife suite. Its Apple logo is now one of the most recognized brand symbols in the world. But did you know that Apple helped start the computer revolution with its first computer in the 1970s?

Apple's founders, Steve Jobs and Stephen Wozniak, met at a computer club in California in the 1970s. At that time you had to build your own computer from parts. But they realized many more people would use home computers if they were simple and easy to use. They raised $1,300 and built a prototype. They had invented PCs as we know them.

In 1976, they formed the Apple Computer Company and Stephen Wozniak became the Vice President who designed most of the softwares. They sold their first computer Apple I, for $666.66, and it earned the company a million dollars. Their second generation computer, Apple II, had on-screen graphics for the first time, and a floppy disk drive. At that time the company wasn’t sure that the public wanted graphics.

In 1980, the company developed and marketed the Macintosh. Apple went through a bad time in the 1990s, when it didn't keep up with the market place. Wozniak and Jobs both left Apple, but Jobs returned in 1997 to take control again. He decided to focus on invention and innovation, aiming to make great products. With their best-selling iPod and iTunes, Apple moved into consumer electronics. By the end of the first year, more than 20 million songs had been purchased from Apple's sites.
